1999 Annual Meeting: Toronto, October 21-23

Make plans now to attend the Society's Annual Meeting, which will be held at the Sheraton Centre Hotel in downtown Toronto, October 21-23, 1999. The meeting hotel is located directly across Queen Street from Osgoode Hall, home of the Osgoode Society, Osgoode Hall Law School of York University, and the Law Society of Upper Canada.

Please watch for information on the Society's Room-Share plan, which will help members cut their lodging costs, in the conference mailing.

Peter Oliver and Marilyn MacFarlane of the Osgoode Society and Susan Lewthwaite of the Law Society of Upper Canada constitute the local arrangements committee. They have been most helpful in making arrangements for the meeting and will host the Annual Lecture and Reception at Osgoode Hall on Friday evening, October 22. During the reception, tours of Osgoode Hall and its wonderful art and architectural features will be available.

Sally Gordon has done outstanding work as chair of the 1999 program committee, which also includes Constance Backhouse (University of Western Ontario), Cornelia Hughes Dayton (University of Connecticut), Christine Desan (Harvard University), Tahirih Lee (Florida State University), Pnina Lahav (Boston University), William LaPiana (New York Law School), Victoria List (Washington & Jefferson College), Kenneth Mack (Princeton University), Gregory Mark (Rutgers University, Newark), Michael Millender (University of Florida), Richard Ross (University of Chicago), Christopher Tomlins (American Bar Foundation and Law and History Review), Howard Venable (New York University), and James Whitman (Yale University). Sally and her committee have assembled the most extensive program in the Society's history—and one of the strongest.

Check out the H-Law web page ( ) for the complete program and abstracts of the papers. Once you've had a chance to check it out, you won't want to miss the meeting. Thanks go to Chris Waldrep of Eastern Illinois University, our webmaster, for his efficiency in getting this information on our web site.

Plan Ahead: 2000 Meeting Scheduled for Princeton, October 19-21, 2000

The Standing Committee on Conferences and the Annual Meeting, with the concurrence of the Executive Committee, has selected Princeton, New Jersey as the site of the 2000 Annual Meeting. The headquarters for the meeting is the historic Nassau Inn which is located across Nassau Street from the Princeton Campus.

President-elect Thomas Green has selected Charles McCurdy of the University of Virginia as Program Committee chair. Watch the H-Law web page ( ) for the committee's call for papers.

Former Society President, Stanley Katz of Princeton's Woodrow Wilson School, and Dirk Hartog of the Princeton History Department have been of enormous help in facilitating arrangements for what promises to be a splendid meeting site to start the new millennium.

Sponsoring and Sustaining Members

The Society wishes to recognize and thank ASLH members who support the Society's General Fund by becoming Sponsoring and Sustaining Members. Sponsoring and Sustaining Members contribute $125 and $75 per year, respectively.

Donald Sutherland Prize

The Society invites nominations (including self-nominations) for the Donald Sutherland Prize, which is awarded annually to the article judged the most significant contribution to English legal history. Nominees may include articles published in journals or collections of original essays and must have a 1998 publication date.

Please submit nominations, with three copies of the article nominated, to Professor DeLloyd Guth; Chair, Sutherland Prize Committee; Faculty of Law; University of Manitoba; Winnipeg, Manitoba; CANADA R3T-2N2.

1999 Elections: Candidate Biographies

The Society's thanks go to Victoria List of Washington and Jefferson College, chair of the Nominating Committee, and her colleagues Sarah Barringer Gordon (University of Pennsylvania), Mary Dudziak (University of Southern California), Michael Grossberg (Indiana University), and Philip Hamburger (George Washington University) for their hard work in selecting a strong slate of candidates for the Board of Directors and the Nominating Committee.

The committee has selected ten nominees for the five open slots on the Board and two nominees for the one vacancy on the Nominating Committee. Brief biographies of the candidates appear below.

A tear-out ballot is included in this issue of the Newsletter. Please complete it and return to: Donald G. Nieman, ASLH, Department of History, Bowling Green State University, Bowling Green, OH 43403. Ballots must be postmarked by October 1, 1999.

Biographies of Board of Directors Nominees

BARBARA ARONSTEIN BLACK was born and raised in Brooklyn, attended the Brooklyn public schools and Brooklyn College (B.A., 1953). Her LL.B. (1955) is from the Columbia Law School, and her Ph.D. (History, 1975) from Yale. She has been Assistant Professor of History at Yale (1976-79) and an Associate Professor at the Yale Law School (1979-84). Since 1984 she has been George Welwood Murray Professor of Legal History at Columbia Law School, where she served as Dean of the Faculty of Law from 1986 to 1991. She has taught a variety of legal History courses and seminars to undergraduates, graduate students and law students. She also teaches contracts. She is a member of the New York and Connecticut Bars, a member of the American Philosophical Society, the Selden Society, and the American Academy of Arts and Sciences, and the recipient of honorary degrees from Brooklyn College, Smith, Georgetown University Law Center and other institutions. She has been a member of the New York State Ethics Commission, and is a member of the Permanent Advisory Board of the Columbia University Jay Papers Project and a member of the Board of Guarantors of the Italian Academy for Advanced Studies in America at Columbia University. Beginning with her dissertation on the judicial power of the Massachusetts General Court in the 17th century, her major interest has been in colonial legal history; she is also now engaged in writing about early twentieth-century contracts scholarship. Service to the Society includes membership on the Board, Chair of the Nominating Committee, during the 80s; President from 1986-89.

DANIEL R. ERNST is Professor of Law at the Georgetown University Law Center, where he has taught since 1988. (He has served as an adjunct in Georgetown's Department of History since 1996.) He holds an undergraduate degree from Dartmouth College, a J.D. from the University of Chicago, an LL.M. from the University of Wisconsin-Madison, and a Ph.D. in History from Princeton University. His publications include Lawyers against Labor (1995), which received the Littleton-Griswold Prize of the American Historical Association, and articles in Law and History Review, Reviews in American History and other journals. Currently he is editing, with Victor Jew, a volume of conference papers, Total War and the Law: New Perspectives on World War II, and is completing papers on New Zealand's Court of Arbitration, based on research conducted while on a Fulbright in 1996. In the fall semester of 1998 he was the Jack and Margaret Sweet Visiting Professor of History at Michigan State University. He chaired the Local Arrangements Committee for the 1994 annual meeting of the ASLH in Washington, D.C., and the Program Committee for the 1998 annual meeting in Seattle. He is a member of the editorial board of Labor History.

DOUGLAS HAY is Associate Professor of Law and History at Osgoode Hall Law School and York University, Toronto, where he teaches legal history and social history. He received his BA and MA degrees in Modern History from the University of Toronto, and a Ph.D. in Social History from the University of Warwick. He has held visiting appointments as Professor of Canadian Studies at Yale and as SSRC Professorial Fellow in Socio-legal Studies at the University of Warwick. He has co-edited and contributed to Albion's Fatal Tree: Crime and Society in Eighteenth-Century England (1975), Labour, Law and Crime in Historical Perspective (1987), Policing and Prosecution in Britain 1750-1850 (1989), Friends of the Chief Justice: The William Osgoode Correspondence (1990), and (with Nicholas Rogers), Eighteenth-Century English Society (1997); he has published articles and chapters on English and Canadian legal history in other collections and in history and law journals, most recently in Past & Present (February 1999). Current work is a collaborative international project on the law of master and servant, and studies of the administration of the criminal law in the eighteenth century and of the court of King's Bench in the eighteenth century. He was on the Board of Directors of the Society 1985-88, and on the board of Law and History Review from 1983-1992. He also has served on committees, boards, or journals of the Law and Society Association, the Canadian Historical Association, and the Social Science History Association, and has been the Chorley Lecturer at the London School of Economics and the Iredell Lecturer in Legal History at the University of Lancaster.

BARBARA HOLDEN-SMITH is currently an Associate Professor of Law at Cornell Law School. She joined the Cornell faculty in 1990. Before that she was in the private practice of law in Washington, D.C. and Chicago. She is a 1984 graduate of the University of Chicago Law School. She currently teaches Civil Procedure, Federal Courts, and a history course called African Americans and the Supreme Court. Her primary areas of research are in the history of the Supreme Court and race. She has written on Justice Joseph Story and his slavery jurisprudence. She is currently working on a biography of the first Justice John Marshall Harlan and on a study of the history of the NAACP's litigation strategy in criminal cases.

NANCY ISENBERG received her Ph.D. in History in 1990 from the University of Wisconsin, followed by a two-year postdoctoral fellowship at the Commonwealth Center at the College of William and Mary. Since 1992, she has taught women's history and film history (exclusively concentrating on the law) at the University of Northern Iowa, where she received tenure in 1998. Also in 1998, her book, Sex and Citizenship in Antebellum America, was published as part of the Gender and American Culture series by the University of North Carolina Press. "'Pillars of the Same Temple and Priests of the Same Worship': The Feminist Politics of Church and State in Antebellum America," appeared in the June 1998 issue of The Journal of American History, and she has published articles in such journals as the American Quarterly, American Studies, Biography, and recently The Nation. Since 1995, she has served on the Editorial Board of Law and History Review, and is currently writing on the Patty Hearst trial.

DANIEL KLERMAN is an Associate Professor at University of Southern California Law School, whose principal research interest is English legal history. Prior to his move to USC in 1998, he was an assistant professor for three years at University of Chicago Law School, a Fulbright fellow in London, and a clerk to Supreme Court Justice John Paul Stevens. He has a J.D. and Ph.D. in History, both from the University of Chicago. His dissertation, which he is currently preparing for publication, examines the private prosecution of crime in thirteenth-century England, with special attention to quantitative analysis and the role of women prosecutors. He has presented two papers at ASLH annual meetings and has published articles in the Georgetown Law Review, Journal of Legal Studies, University of Southern California Law Review, and University of Chicago Law Review. He has been a member of ASLH since 1991.

PNINA LAHAV is Professor of Law at Boston University. She has a law degree from the Hebrew University in Jerusalem, an LL.M. and S.J.D. from Yale Law School, and an MA in political science from Boston University. She has been teaching constitutional law—American, Israeli and comparative—and political and civil liberties both in the United States and in Israel. She has been interested in human rights, women's rights and the right to free speech for a long time and has written extensively about these subjects. Lahav's most recent book is Judgment in Jerusalem, Chief Justice Simon Agranat and the Zionist Century (University of California Press, 1997) and in Hebrew, Am-Oved (1999). It won the 1998 Seltner Award and the Graetz Centennial Book Award, and has been a selection of the History Book Club. Lahav just finished a two year term as the President of the Association for Israeli Studies, an association of scholars studying Israel in the United States and elsewhere, and served on the program committee of the ASLH for the year 1999.

GREGORY MARK is Professor of Law and a member of the graduate faculty in history at Rutgers - Newark. His recent publications deal with the history of the right to petition, the origins and early development of federalism and corporate law, and the history of the role of the state in the creation of corporate law. He is currently working on articles dealing with the evolution of corporate law and the historical uses of the petition by women. Professor Mark serves as a member of the Program Committee for the 1999 Toronto meeting of the Society and also serves on various other committees for the ASLH, the Association of American Law Schools, and other academic societies. Before teaching at Rutgers, Professor Mark taught at Cleveland-Marshall College of Law. Before beginning his teaching career he was an Associate Counsel in the Office of the Independent Counsel investigating Iran/Contra. He attended law school at the University of Chicago and did graduate work in American history at Harvard.

WILLIAM E. NELSON, a lifetime member of the Society, is Ehrenkranz Professor of Law at New York University. He was Assistant Editor of the American Journal of Legal History when it was the official journal of the Society and simultaneously served on the Society's Board of Directors. He is the author of two books in the Society's Studies in Legal History series—Americanization of the Common Law: The Impact of Legal Change on Massachusetts Society, 1760-1830 and Dispute and Conflict Resolution in Plymouth County, Massachusetts, 1725-1825. He has also submitted his forthcoming book, The Legalist Reformation: Law, Politics, and Ideology in New York, 1920-1980, to the series. Another book, The Fourteenth Amendment: From Political Principle to Judicial Doctrine won the Littleton-Griswold Prize.

EMILY FIELD VAN TASSEL is Visiting Associate Professor of Law at Indiana University-Bloomington. She received her graduate training at Case Western Reserve University and the University of Chicago. She received her J.D. from the University of Wisconsin, where she served as an editor of the Wisconsin Law Review. She first became a member of ASLH in 1977 as a graduate student. She has taught in both history departments and law schools. Institutions where she has taught include Georgetown University, the University of Maryland, Widener University, Case Western Reserve University and Indiana University. She was formerly Associate Historian at the Federal Judicial Center in Washington D.C. and was a Women's Law and Public Policy Fellow with the United States Senate Judiciary Committee. She has been a consultant to the National Commission on Judicial Discipline & Removal. She has worked with the National Archives and individual manuscript repositories, as well as federal judges, to insure the preservation of federal records and papers of federal judges. She has presented papers and published articles on the history of the federal judiciary and on the legal history of family, race and gender. Her articles appear in such places as the University of Pennsylvania Law Review, the Georgetown Law Journal, and the Chicago-Kent Law Review. She is the author of "Why Judges Resign" (Fed. Jud. Cntr., 1993) and co-author of "Impeachable Offenses" (Cong. Q. Press, 1998). She is currently working on the history and contemporary contours of judicial independence in the federal system, and on a history of family property law in the post-bellum South.

CONSTANCE BACKHOUSE is a Professor of Law at the University of Western Ontario. As of 1 July 2000, she will become a Professor of Law at the University of Ottawa. She is the author of Petticoats and Prejudice: Women and the Law in Nineteenth-Century Canada, which was awarded the Willard Hurst Prize in American Legal History. Her latest book on legal history, Colour-Coded: A Legal History of Racism in Canada, 1900-1950 will be co-published by the Osgoode Society and the University of Toronto Press in 1999. Constance Backhouse has previously served on the Board of Directors and the Program Committee for the ASLH, and has also served on the executive committee of the Canadian Law and Society Association.

VICTORIA SAKER WOESTE is a Research Fellow at the American Bar Foundation in Chicago, where she works on problems associated with twentieth-century legal history, regulation, business, agriculture, and the state. She came to the Foundation in 1994 from Amherst College, where she taught legal history and American studies. Her Ph.D. is from the Jurisprudence and Social Policy Program at Berkeley, so she has spent her entire professional life in interdisciplinary programs. What that says about her relationship to history departments she leaves to others to discern. At the Foundation she is co-editor of Law and Social Inquiry and will help launch the new graduate program in law and social science in the fall. In 1998 her book, The Farmer's Benevolent Trust: Law and Cooperation in Industrial America, 1865-1945, was published in the Studies in Legal History Series of the University of North Carolina Press. She has published articles in Law and History Review, Business and Economic History, and Audacity; she has contributed to a collection of essays edited by Harry Scheiber and forthcoming anthologies edited by Robert Johnston and Catherine McNichol Stock, and by Wes Pue and David Sugarman. Service to the ASLH includes chair of the membership committee, 1997-2000; member of the board of directors, 1996-1998; and member of the 1992 Program Committee for the Yale meeting. She is currently at work on a new project involving lawyers, anti-Semitism, agricultural policy, Henry Ford, and radicalism in the interwar period.

National Humanities Center Announces Fellowships for 2000-2001

The National Humanities Center, which is located in Research Triangle Park, NC, offers 35-40 residential fellowships for advanced study in all areas of the humanities. Applicants must hold the doctorate or equivalent credentials and have a record of publication. Both senior and younger scholars are eligible, but the latter should be engaged in research well beyond the subjects of their doctoral dissertations. Fellowships are for the academic year (September-May). Scholars from any nation may apply. Humanistically inclined individuals from the natural and social sciences, the arts, the professions, and public life may also apply.

Among its 35-40 fellowships for 2000-2001, the Center will award three or four Lilly Fellowships in Religion and the Humanities for the study of religion by humanistic scholars from fields other than religion and theology. The Center will also award a Burroughs Wellcome Fellowship in the History of Modern Medicine—a senior fellowship for which historians of medicine or biomedical science, medical anthropologists, and other scholars whose work concerns the history of twentieth century medicine are encouraged to apply.

Fellowships are individually determined, the amount depending on the needs of the fellow and the Center's ability to meet them. The average stipend is $35,000, with a few available up to $50,000. The Center does not cover fringe benefits.

For application material write to Fellowship Program, National Humanities Center, P.O. Box 12256, Research Triangle Park, NC 27709-2256. Applicants must submit the Center's form along with a curriculum vitae, a 1000-word project proposal, and three letters of recommendation. Applications and letters must be postmarked by October 15, 1999.
